

The Saga of The Grand Hindu Pantheon on Grand Canyon

By Dr. Murarilal Nagar

The Hindu Amphitheater in the Grand Canyon is part of a number of formations named with Hindu mythology in mind.

They say: “Even without asking one may get a pearl.
And yet one may not get alms even after begging.”

Kumari Alaka of Om Shanti Mandiram, also known as Alexandra Wayllace from Bolivia, has prepared and presented a moving show of the Hindu Temples/Gods on Grand Canyon. It is really a moving show in every sense of the term.

It was many years ago, Sarla and I had seen a specific formation on Grand Canyon that looked like the Trimurti—Brahma, Vishnu and Shiva. It was a far fetched fantastic idea. Both of us had seen it, but did not dare to disclose this to another because it might have been seen as a laughable idea! This is called Self pride—false ego! But when we went to the nearest Tourist Center and Rest House, both of us saw a picture shining right on the bulletin board and testifying this very fantastic idea as a recognized reality. And both of us told each other: I had seen it and thought it so!

While working on OM, just about three years ago, an idea came to my mind to locate the very picture and share it with other members of OMGOD Group.

I went around with a begging bowl from pillar to post. By correspondence I knocked at the doors of regional libraries as well as offices of the tourists trade. It was all frustration and disappointment. Even those who were helped by me tremendously did not help although they could
